

Dining with Death marks the launch of Good Life, Good Death, Good Grief, the new alliance working to make Scotland a place where there is more openness about death, dying and bereavement. Membership is free, and open to all groups, organisations and individuals who wish to support the aims and objectives of the alliance.

Join at: www.goodlifedeathgrief.org.uk

1a Cambridge Street
Edinburgh EH1 2DY
Tel: 0131 229 0538
Fax: 0131 228 2967

info@goodlifedeathgrief.org.uk
www.goodlifedeathgrief.org.uk

Good Life, Good Death, Good Grief is an initiative of the Scottish Partnership for Palliative Care, a Company Limited by Guarantee. Registered in Scotland No 13303. Registered Charity (SC017979)

Dining with Death

Conversation Menu

Starters

Is there really a taboo about death, dying and bereavement in Scotland?

Cremation or burial?

Church yard or wood?

Nature taking its course or assisted suicide?

Are there three places you want to go before you die?

Are there three things you really must do before you die?

Where would you like to be when you die?

Mains

What are your thoughts on the media portrayal of death, dying and bereavement? How do you think this affects how society views death?

What things do you think make for a “good death”?

How do you think Scotland would take to the Mexican ‘day of the dead’, when families gather to celebrate and remember friends and family members who have died?

Many women these days have a “birth plan”. But what would be in a “death plan” and when would you start writing it?

What words do you want on your tombstone?

What could you do to help Scotland become more open about death, dying and bereavement both as an individual and professionally?

Tea & Coffee

What song or music would you like at your funeral and why?

How would you like to be remembered?